Understanding Diversity in Our Schools

Presented by Lori Hamilton, Assistant Director of Special Education, SE Kansas Education Service Center—Greenbush

Understanding diversity and respect for differences is important. Too often, differences make students anxious and/or become a focus for bully behavior. Given that teaching and learning rests on relationships, how we understand, manage and celebrate diversity matters! By not teaching respect for differences, ongoing teasing and bullying behavior will undermine a positive school climate, student learning and achievement and positive youth development. More and more schools and districts are invested in making their school community more inclusive for all students.

A list of resources to support the module is available with the video.

Running Time: 25.39 minutes; Learning Credits: .75
