MASA Presents: Moving Along the SAMR Ladder with the 4Cs

Presented by Ryan Cox, Director of Instructional Technology, Becker Public Schools

Education in America was developed to serve a society that no longer exists. Years ago, schools offered “the three Rs” and that was enough to support the American economy. But today, for students to compete in a global and diverse society, they must be supported by skills known as “the four Cs:” Communication, Creativity, Critical Thinking and Collaboration. In this video, Ryan Cox shares how districts can address the educational needs of today’s students by infusing technology into the educational experience, the SAMR model. Links to additional resources mentioned in the presentation are available with the video.

Running Time: 46:11 Learning Credits: 1.0
