

Achieving the Ethical Workplace

In The Ethics Edge, Edited by Evan Berman, Jonathan West, and Stephen Bonczec

Respond to the following questions either correct or false and explain your response:

1. Ethical values are personal and should not be expressed within the organization?
2. Ethical people always act ethically regardless of what goes on in the organization?
3. Ethics discussions in public organizations contribute little, if anything, to productivity, morale, or problem solving?
4. Ethics cannot be learned, taught or even discussed in any meaningful way?
5. Only employees who have greater opportunity for ethical failings or shortcomings should be encouraged or required to attend ethical training?
6. Creating and distributing a written ethics policy eliminates any further responsibility of the organization or its leaders?
7. Appearing to do wrong and actually doing wrong are different matters?
8. An ethical workplace can be achieved quickly?